

ABSTRACT

Apparatus and method for recovering clock and data signals from received transmission line information and for regenerating the recovered clock and data signals.

The apparatus comprises a clock detector for recovering and generating a clock signal
5 from the received transmission line information and a data detector for recovering and regenerating data contained in the received transmission line information and directional coupling apparatus for magnetically coupling the received transmission line information with the clock and data circuitry.

DECLASSIFIED